Samling Donates Medical Supplies to Lahad Datu Hospital

As one of Malaysia's leading multinational conglomerates, the Samling Group is well positioned to help local communities grappling with the COVID-19 outbreak. We continue to play an important role in supporting the authorities in their effort to combat the virus.

By mid-April 2020, the need for medical supplies, personal protective equipment (PPE) and other medical equipment had increased significantly. We responded to this growing need by donating critical medical equipment and essential medical supplies to over 100 medical institutions in Sarawak.

On April 29, 2020, we contributed 60,000 surgical masks, 500 protective suits, 15 thermometers, and 50 bottles of 500ml sanitisers to the Lahad Datu Hospital.

Our work to support the response to the COVID-19 pandemic is part of our long-standing commitment to safeguarding the health and safety of our employees and the public, and to supporting the needs of the communities in which we live and work. This a commitment we have embraced throughout our company's history.
